HIS TRAINING

(Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure.)

"What you need," said the younger Miss Rodman to the big young man who lounged on the rail, "is a thorough course of sprouts. You can't expect to win Nan's heart with five pound boxes of candy and expensive flowers alone."

"I imagine I am a trifle—er—raw in these things," said Hicks, smiling at the earnest face before them.

It was an attractive face, full of pretty dimples and prone to flash upon you some surprising expression you had never dreamed could be so entrancing.

"I am a rather faint hearted courtier, I'll admit," he added, with an easy laugh.

"You are, that's true," said Miss Rodman.

"My dear Miss Rodman," said he. "I am not Nan's keeper. What right had I to say whether she should go or stay?"

"Act as if you had the right anyway," she advised.

Hicks laughed.

"I'm fearful of the consequences if I did," said he. "You see, all those years when I dwelt at the mines with only the society of half breeds and greasers have done their full work. In the society of such women as your sister I'm as bashful as a schoolboy."

"I'll help you," she said. "If you were like the other men here I'd never offer my services, but you're so big and good natured and so helpless."

"Thanks," he said. "I need help badly. What do you intend to do?"

"Educate you," she said, "or educate the fear of women out of you. I believe I'm the only girl here you're not afraid of."

"May I ask for some hint as to your methods?" he said.

"I'll serve as dummy and instructor in one," she explained. "You must devote two weeks to me. Begin as if you had just met me. Take me driving and to the dances and all that sort of thing. In short, make love to me and finally propose. I'll watch you carefully and give you points. When you've taken your diploma in this course strike out for Nan."

Hicks straightened himself on the veranda rail.

"I'm awfully grateful to you," he said, with conviction. "It's no end kind of you to take this interest and trouble. When do we begin?"

"No time like the present," she laughed. "You may go down to the stable, get the cob and take me for a drive."

"Look here," said Hicks, "I'll do my very best, and I'll try to get my lessons thoroughly. I'll bring some candy."

"Not yet," she said. "That will come in the advanced lessons."

She watched him walk briskly down the walk, and a bewildering smile brought out all her dimples.

"I wouldn't have gone with Williams if I'd been Nan," she said pointedly as she went into the house to array herself for the drive.

The next two weeks were busy ones for Hicks. He was devoted to the younger Miss Rodman. He took her to the casino dances and sent her endless supplies of candy and flowers. They drove together through the surrounding country. They poked about the river in a punt and discovered all sorts of jolly retreats and quaint little lovers' nooks.

The elder Miss Rodman looked on with condescending approval. She began to treat Hicks with sisterly frankness. Two weeks earlier this would have made him extremely uneasy. Now he did not care.

Hicks and his instructor were punting on the river one afternoon. The girl looked up suddenly.

"You're coming on all right," she said encouragingly. "I didn't know you could say such nice things as you have this afternoon."

"Neither did I," he said, with a frankness that set them both laughing.

"I think," said she, "you've got about all you can out of this course. Therefore I'll give you your diploma, and you'd better begin on Nan."

"Just a little longer," Hicks objected. "I need more confidence yet."

He looked at the girl quizzically, and their eyes met—only for a moment, for hers suddenly fell.

"If you like, then," she said and laughed rather artificially.

Two evenings later they sat in a quiet corner on the casino veranda. Through the open windows came the dreamy notes of a waltz. Hicks leaned toward the girl and took one of her hands in his. In the moonlight he saw the telltale color creep into her cheeks.

"You haven't any idea what your instruction has come to mean to me," he said. "But now that I have learned what it means I can't live without it. You must instruct me through life. I shan't say will you marry me, but you must marry me, Betty."

She started, then laughed softly.

"Oh, yes, of course, the proposal," she said lightly. "I've no criticism to make. It's very well done. Only you must remember at the really critical time that my sister's name is Nan, not Betty."

"This is the critical time," said he gravely, "and you know I'm not rehearsing. I've not given Nan a thought since that first ride of ours. I've been in earnest—terribly in earnest—all the time. Don't say you haven't been too."

She was silent.

"Weren't you in earnest?" he asked in pleading tones.

Her eyes were looking pensively far away, but her hand tightened about his.

"Did you ever suppose I was a kindergarten for Nan's suitors?" she asked.

BARRY PRESTON.

Young women may avoid much sickness and pain, says Miss Alma Pratt, if they will only have faith in the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to tell all young women how much Lydia E. Pinkham's wonderful Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was completely run down, unable to attend school, and did not care for any kind of society, but now I feel like a new person, and have gained seven pounds of flesh in three months. I recommend it to all young women who suffer from female weakness."—MISS ALMA PRATT, Holly, Mich.

FREE MEDICAL ADVICE TO YOUNG GIRLS. All young girls at this period of life are earnestly invited to write Mrs. Pinkham for advice; she has guided in a motherly way hundreds of young women; her advice is freely and cheerfully given, and her address is Lynn, Mass.

Judging from the letters she is receiving from so many young girls Mrs. Pinkham believes that our girls are often pushed altogether too near the limit of their endurance nowadays; in our public schools and seminaries. Nothing is allowed to interfere with studies, the girl must be pushed to the front and graduated with honor; often physical collapse follows, and it takes years to recover the lost vitality,—often it is never recovered.

A Young Chicago Girl Saved from Despair.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to thank you for the help and benefit I have received through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills. When I was about seventeen years old I suddenly seemed to lose my usual good health and vitality. Father said I studied too hard, but the doctor thought different and prescribed tonics, which I took by the quart without relief. Reading one day in the paper of Mrs. Pinkham's great cures, and finding the symptoms described answered mine, I decided I would give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. I did not say a word to the doctor; I bought it myself, and took it according to directions regularly for two months, and I found that I gradually improved, and that all pains left me, and I was my old self once more."—LILLIE E. SINCLAIR, 17 E. 22d St., Chicago Ill.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the one sure remedy to be relied upon at this important period in a young girl's life; with it she can go through with courage and safety the work she must accomplish, and fortify her physical well being so that her future life may be insured against sickness and suffering.
